APRIL IN REVIEW:

During the month of April, we continued our study about community helpers. We intentionally planned for the children to take on the roles of each community helper and investigate by doing those jobs. The children chose to discuss police officers first and we used magnifying glasses to study prints, searched for clues as we solved a mystery in our classroom, were sworn in as real room 7 officers, and we also discussed appropriate times to get help from a police officer. Ask your expert in community helpers about the hard work we did, such as, seeing real police tools from Officer Twiddy, asking Sergeant Strayhorn our police questions and listening to a police officer story, painting with yarn using police colors, and using our listening skills as real room 7 police officers.

WHAT IS NEW IN MAY?

During the month of May, we plan to continue our second project: community helpers. We have spent a few weeks on police officers learning what they do each day and how they help our community. The children then chose to discuss doctors next. We will begin by learning what types of doctors there are, what they do each day, and discussing our personal experiences with doctors. We are unsure as to how long the children will stay interested in doctors. We plan to continue observing each week to determine where the children's curiosity is. Just a reminder that our studies are completely child guided and they could last for weeks or months. We so are excited to become experts in our second study.
